To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER.

SIR,

YOUR Publication of the Eſſay on Happineſs, has encourag'd me to ſupply you with another on Manners by the ſame Hand ——I think it as fine a Leſſon of Behaviour as can be given by any Philoſopher whatever; I think 'tis highly worthy of the greateſt Eſteem and Veneration, and would recommend the Practice of it as moſt effectual to the forming of the wiſe Man, and fine Gentleman. I am,

Sir, Your very humble Servant.

MANNERS make the MAN.

AS Integrity is the only ſolid Foundation of Society; ſo Affability and Complaiſance, by rendering Men agreeable and ſerviceable to each other, contribute not a little to its Ornament and Support. By Complaiſance is not here intended the Uſe of unmeaning Compliments or troubleſom Ceremonies, juſtly reckoned among the Incumbrances of Converſation; nor low Compliances, or fulſom Flatteries, never expected by the Good and Generous, always deſpiſed by the Sincere and Honeſt. The Complaiſance or Affability we would recommend, is that Part of Politeneſs, which conſiſts in proper Reſpect paid to the Perſons, and due Deference ſhewn to the Opinions of others. If any doubt the Neceſſity of this Conduct, for Men to become agreeable and ſerviceable to one another, they need but try how they reliſh Diſreſpect ſhewn to themſelves, or Contempt of their Opinions: And how unacceptable Advice, or even any other good Office is, when accompanied with diſcourteous Treatment.

The true Method of gaining Reſpect is, rather by doing Actions worthy of it, than ſeeming much to deſire it: There is great Proneneſs in Men to diſappoint thoſe who appear over-fond of Eſteem; and ſurely this is but reaſonable, if they do nothing to deſerve it. No Behaviour can be more oppoſite to Complaiſance, than that ſtrutting Mien and Air of Defiance ſo much affected by ſome Men, whoſe Bravery commonly lies wholly on the Outſide, and is chiefly exerciſed on thoſe who are too much their Inferiors or Dependants to reſent Injuries as they deſerve: But ſuch Men ſhould conſider, there is a levelling Nature in Quarrelling and Abuſe, by which Superiors are very apt to loſe, and often juſtly forfeit, that Reſpect which would otherwiſe be their due.

It is certainly but juſt as well as decent, that every Man ſhould behave to his Equals, as he expects they ſhould behave to him; and Humanity requires, that we remember thoſe in Stations beneath us are our Fellow-Creatures, and that the Difference betwixt us is not natural, but accidental. A low Station in Life is often accompanied with Deſert, and Superiority too ſeldom the Reward of Excellency.

People who confine their Converſation to one Set of Men, and ſee little of the World, commonly entertain great Partiality for their own Opinions, Cuſtoms and Faſhions: This makes them very uncomplaiſant, and apt to condemn every Thing they are not accuſtomed to: On the contrary, thoſe who have converſed in a more general Manner, and particularly ſuch as have travell'd into Foreign Countries, frequently become complaiſant; which may proceed partly from Things growing familiar that were before uncommon and ſtrange; but more eſpecially from a Deſire natural in moſt Men, to beget in Strangers a good Opinion both of themſelves and their Country. This under proper Regulations is undoubtedly laudable; and I heartily wiſh it was the Care of every Traveller, and my Countrymen in particular.

Some Men beſtow Civilities, as Miſers lend their Money, in Expectation of Repayment with unreaſonable Intereſt: Others are uncomplaiſant by Deſign; they fancy a rough Behaviour will be taken for Honeſty, and Poſitiveneſs for good Senſe: But the firſt is often uſed as a Cloak to Knavery, and the latter, as well as Gravity, a Cover to Ignorance. It is true, Appearances paſs with many People for Realities; otherwiſe we ſhould not ſee ſuch Effects attend the appearing thoroughly Self-ſufficient, nor ſo much Reſpect paid to ſome Men for no other Reaſon but their paying a great deal to themſelves.

That Species of Pride, which conſiſts in Mens overvaluing themſelves, and thinking diminutively of others, is a great Enemy to Complaiſance: Thoſe who have the largeſt Share of Knowledge, are always the moſt ſenſible of their own Defects, and the Shortneſs of Human Underſtanding; they find many Occaſions for Humility, none for Pride.

A complaiſant Behaviour is generally acquired by keeping good Company; but is moſt eaſily gain'd, and conſtantly practiſed by thoſe who are good natur'd, and of a benevolent Diſpoſition: Such have the Root in themſelves, and find little more to do, than to prune the Branches as they ſhoot out.

By carrying Complaiſance too far, it degenerates into Flattery: They who practice this for Intereſt, are dangerous Animals, and ought carefully to be avoided: Such who through an unmanly Levity make a Sacrifice of their Underſtandings to almoſt every one that oppoſes them, ſoon loſe all Sentiments of their own, and have generally but ſmall Offerings to make. Whoever is well acquainted with Ned Supple, and thoſe he converſes with, may eaſily know what Company he laſt kept by the Opinion he is then of, and which they may be aſſured he will part with the firſt time it is oppoſed. Ned is like the Camelion, that has no Colours properly its own, but borrows from the neareſt Object.

Men who are naturally of rough and moroſe Tempers, by habituating themſelves to the Practice of Complaiſance, gain a ſort of artificial Good Temper; but by Peeviſhneſs and Ill Manners grow from one Degree of Humour and Behaviour to another, till they become a Jeſt to others, and a Torment to Themſelves.

We frequently meet with Inſtances of the moſt boiſterous Tempers being calm'd, when Men think their Intereſt and Reputation at Stake; and ſurely the Intereſt and Reputation of every Man is concerned in behaving with Decency and Affability!

The Converſation of thoſe in Stations above us, eſpecially if we have any Expectations from them, is very apt to beget a ſoft and mild Manner of Addreſs; and what Character do theſe Men deſerve, who will not do that for the Sake of Decency, and the Good of the Community, that they will act for their particular Intereſt?

It has been recommended to ſuch who are unpolite in Behaviour, that they ſacrifice to the Graces; May it not as well be ſaid——converſe with the Ladies? Certainly nothing will ſooner or more effectually wear off all unmannerly and clowniſh Behaviour.

Tom Lovemore, from being clamorous, poſitive and contentious, became at once mild, condeſcending and obliging: He would formerly admit no Debate on what he aſſerted, and was to the higheſt Degree impatient of Contradiction; but now only propoſes his Opinion; would by no Means be too poſitive; is willing to be convinced by better Reaſons. This ſtrange Alteration amazed all his Acquaintance, till they heard he made his Addreſſes to the accompliſhed and beauteous Belinda.

Many excellent Qualities loſe their Beauty and good Effects for want of Complaiſance. Wit without it is like ſome Ingredients in Medicine, which tho' of noble Uſe when corrected by proper Lenitives, are attended with pernicious Conſſequences if uſed without them. Some Men beſtow Favours with ſo little Complaiſance, that they almoſt loſe their Name, and a Denial from others is little leſs grateful. Good Senſe is attended with leſs Force and Efficacy on others, as well as Pleaſure to the Owners, without a Mixture of this Behaviour.

Perſons who converſe with much Intimacy are very apt to neglect Complaiſance, not conſidering it is the Cement of Society; by this Means they often fall into rude and indecent Familiarities: Thoſe who are exactly well-bred, frequently behave with much Freedom to their Companions; and indeed without this unreſtrained and open Converſation, a conſiderable Pleaſure in Life would be loſt; but Care muſt be taken, that ſuch Conduct is only to thoſe who are capable of making a right Uſe and proper Return of it: When half-bred People affect to imitate thoſe who are really genteel, and awkwardly endeavour at theſe Freedoms, they grow very troubleſom, and never fail of being ridiculous.

If Men would be well-heard in Company, they ſhould give Attention to others: If treated with Reſpect, they ſhould treat others ſo. Direct Contradictions, loud and poſitive Aſſertions, with all perſonal Reflections, are as unbecoming a Gentleman, as they are unlikely to convince the Underſtanding or mend the Heart. Men may be perſuaded, but not threatened or bullied out of their Opinions: All Attempt to that Purpoſe, is playing the little Tyrant. Many People, by a genteel, good-natur'd Hint or Reproof, may be reclaim'd from an Error; but by unmannerly or ſevere Reproaches, moſt are render'd obſtinate; all have Reaſon to be diſpleas'd. A kind Reproof will make a good Man your Friend; an unmannerly Reflection will make moſt Men your Enemies.

We may put the Cheat on ourſelves, or endeavour to deceive Mankind; but it is certain that all Severity on Opinions, or perſonal Failings which do not prejudice other Perſons, or injure the Community, proceed from Pride, Hypocriſy, Ill-nature, or all of them, and not from a ſincere Deſire of reclaiming Particulars, or doing Service to the Publick. How frequently have we ſeen Men very ſevere againſt thoſe Actions in others, that, when varied a little in Form, and ſometimes even without that Alteration, they have been privately guilty of themſelves? Oh this abominable Practice of going to Taverns! It was not ſo when I was a young Man, ſays old Teſty; but notwithſtanding the Exclamation, he drinks Drams by himſelf, till he forgets the Sobriety of former Times as well as the Licentiouſneſs of the preſent. The impudent Creature! cries Mrs. Faddle, when her Couſin was ſuſpected of ſome imprudent Freedoms; ſuch ſhould not be ſuffered to live; but three Weeks after, ſhe herſelf was found practiſing with her Coachman. What damnable Doctrines do theſe Fanaticks teach! ſays Mr. Orthodox; and at the ſame time warmly aſſerts, that all who have the Impudence to think for themſelves, and diſſent from Opinions by Law eſtabliſhed, ought to be puniſh'd here, and will certainly be damn'd hereafter. Lady Frigid was, it's true, never ſuſpected of Incontinence, therefore tires all her Acquaintance with railing againſt it; but it is plain this pretended Virtue is owing meerly to want of Inclination; for there is not a Paſſion exiſting in her Compoſition that ſhe does not indulge without the leaſt Reſtraint; Pride and Envy appear glaringly in her Conduct abroad; Anger and Tyranny in her Behaviour at home, where ſhe is indeed an Iron-ſceptered Queen.

The benign and kindly Influences of Affability and Complaiſance, when they generally prevail among any People, are extended farther than the Affairs of private Perſons or ſmall Societies. Nations are conſiderably affected and benefited by them; the rugged and cruel Face of War, ever ſufficiently terrible and forbidding, is ſomewhat ſmoothed and ſoftened, when it happens between polite Nations. This will plainly appear to any one, who compares the inhuman Barbarities exerciſed in War by uncivilized People, with the more human and leſs cruel conduct of the Polite. It is well known, the preſent Practice of the Indians in America, is always to deſtroy, or make Slaves of thoſe they conquer; and Hiſtory furniſhes us with large Accounts of the horrid Cruelties uſed amongſavage and unpoliſh'd Nations; in the firſt Rank of which, by the Teſtimonies of their Hiſtorians, the Jews ought undoubtedly to be placed: When they conquered, they extirpated; Camels and Aſſes, Sheep and Oxen, Men and Women, Infants and Sucklings, were deſtined to compleat the cruel Carnage; and Kings were hewed in Pieces before the Lord. If we compare the Behaviour of the Allies and French in the late long War, which on both Sides was carried on in as genteel a Manner as poſſible, with that of the Jews, and other unpoliſh'd Nations, we ſhall then ſee the different Conduct of barbarous and polite, complaiſant and uncomplaiſant People.

IMmortal Bard, when I attend thy Lays,
I own my Pleaſure muſt tranſcend my Praiſe!
What Charms of Language ſhine in every Strain!
A Naſſau's Glory, or a Brunſwick's Reign!
And Marlbro's Conqueſts live in his Campaign.
The Poet's Lays adorn the Patriot's Deeds,
When Godlike Cato for his Country bleeds.
Say, great APOLLO, how cou'dſt thou inſpire
A Maro's Judgment with a Milton's Fire?
Majeſtic Bard, your Flights to Heav'n renew;
We'll view with Wonder, tho' we can't purſue:
Angels are Poets, tho' they ſing like you.

On hearing a Lady ſing one Evening in the Park.

I.

WHen fair Ophelia tunes her Voice,
The feather'd Choir attend her Song,
And as they catch the melting Notes
Repeat them as they fly along.

II.

Not the ſoft Muſick of the NINE,
Or of th' harmonious Spheres;
Not the ſoft Notes of dying Swans,
Were half ſo ſweet as her's.

III.
Sure 'twas fair VENUS in diſguiſe,
With ſweet APOLLO's Tongue;
So much ſhe like the Goddeſs look'd,
So like the God ſhe ſung.

The ROSE, from Taſſo.

I.
SEE, Celia, ſee, the budding ROSE
That courts the Morning Ray!
And, with the Light compleat in Charms,
Full-blooming lives the Day!
II.
But when the Night all ſable ſpreads
Her awful Horrors round;
See, how ſhe fades, and drooping dies,
Neglected on the Ground!
III.
No longer then with killing Frowns
Torment your faithful Swain;
No more, like a coy Veſtal, fly,
And waſte your Youth in vain.
IV.
Art thou ſtill deaf?—Still with Diſdain
Doſt thou behold my Sorrow?——
Then know,——tho' thou art fair to Day,
Thy Charms may die to Morrow.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Arrived Mails.——Friday; one from Holland.——Saturday; one from France.——Tueſday; one from Holland. Thurſday; one from France.

Extract of a Letter from Santa-Crux in South-Barbary.

ON the 28th of January 1731, O. S. we had a dreadful Storm of Wind at W. S. W. which began about One o'Clock in the Morning, and continued with great Violence till nine. It brought a moſt terrible Sea into our Bay, where the following Ships being then Riding at Anchor were all loſt, viz. The Catherine Brig. Capt. Gaſcoigne Finch, founder'd at an Anchor about three o'Clock; the Capt. was on Shore. One John Lowe was by God's good Providence drove on Shore on a Piece of the Quarter-Deck, but the reſt of her Crew were drowned. She had Goods on board of about 2500 Dollars Value.

Whether the Leghorn Sloop, Captain Michael Oxenberry, founder'd or ran aſhore (as it was in the Night) we can't tell, for all her Crew periſh'd. The Captain's Son fortunately happen'd to be on Shore. She had on board about 250 Quintals of Wool, and 180 Quintals of Hydes.

The Leghorn Factor Brig. Capt. Benjamin Arnold, founder'd at an Anchor before Day-break; about eight o'Clock Part of her Wreck came aſhore near Taddert. The Capt. was on Shore, but the Mate and four Mariners were drowned. She had on board about 500 Dozen of Cochineal Cordevant Skins, which She took in at Salle, 3164 ſingle Cakes, containing 63814 lb. of fine and ordinary Copper Tangult.

About ſix o'Clock the Sarah Scooner, Capt. John Fletcher was forced on Shore near the Chriſtian's Warehouſe under her Fore-ſail, by which Means her Crew was ſaved. She had on board only 400 Raw Hides.

About ſeven o'Clock the Diligence Dogger, Capt. Daniel Vander Klip, was obliged to cut her Cables and run aſhore near the ſame Place, and thereby ſaved the Crew, the Mate only excepted, who was drowned getting over her Side. She came from Amſterdam, and had all her Cargo (a Trifle only excepted) on board, valued at 15,000 Ducats, of about 7s. 6d. each. About an Hour after run aſhore near the other two, the Brig. Prophet Jonas, Capt. John Duncan, whoſe Crew was alſo ſaved. She was the laſt Ship left in the Bay, and had on board only about 280 Quintals of Prize Soap bought at Salle.

Out of all the Ships and Cargoes, not the Value of 5 l. Sterling was ſaved; for what Wreck came on Shore, the Moors carry'd off. We had ſurpriſing Thunder, Lightning, and Rain, as well as Wind, the like never known before in theſe Parts, which hath almoſt waſhed down the Town.

Naples, April 3. We have felt no Shock of an Earthquake ſince the 27th paſt; but the melancholy Accounts which come daily from all Parts of the Kingdom, of the Damages thereby ſuſtained, keep us ſtill under a great Conſternation, particularly that from the Iſland of Iſchia, over which ſeveral Phænomena have appeared hovering of late, which fill the People with new Apprehenſions of ſome fatal Event. Above 3000 Perſons are now found to have periſh'd by the late Earthquake at Foggia, and very few Houſes left ſtanding.

Rome, April 7. On Saturday laſt Cardinal Coſcia made his Eſcape out of Town, attended only by his Valet de Chambre and another Domeſtick. His Eminency's Retreat from Juſtice makes a great Noiſe here, and his Manifeſto, which he has left behind him, tending to prove the great Injuſtice done him, and vindicate this laſt Step of his, carries very little Weight with the Publick. On the contrary, he is univerſally blam'd to the laſt Degree, for having thus render'd himſelf unworthy of the Protection or good Offices of any Potentate, and in particular of the Emperor, who was thought much inclin'd to ſerve him. Cardinal Cinfuegos has diſpatch'd an Expreſs to Vienna, to acquaint his Imperial Majeſty, and forbidden his Domeſticks from holding the leaſt Correſpondence with thoſe belonging to the Cardinal, or ſheltering any of his Effects. The Pope has likewiſe diſpatch'd a Courier after him with Orders for him to ſurrender himſelf a Priſoner into the Convent of St. Praxedes, under the Pain of loſing all his Benefices and Preferments, whither the Archbiſhop of Targa, his Brother, is already conducted, and there kept under a ſtrong Guard, by ſpecial Order of his Holineſs.

Florence, April 7. The Grand Duke, our Sovereign, is in perfect Health, and this Week gave the uſual Audiences to his Miniſters. Yeſterday an Expreſs was diſpatch'd to Vienna with his Royal Highneſs's Anſwer touching the Treaty concluded laſt at Vienna. Our laſt Letters from the Plain of St. Stephen, mention the terrible Havock made thereabouts by ſeveral Earthquakes, inſomuch that the People quitted their Houſes, and lodge in Tents, under continual Apprehenſions of being ſwallow'd up.

Leghorn, April 7. Our laſt Advices from Corſica import, that the Malecontents of that Iſland have refuſed to ſend their Deputies to Baſtia to treat of an Accommodation; upon which the Commiſſioners on the Part of the Republick of Genoa, appear'd inclin'd to wait on them in their Camp, to perſuade them by fair Means to lay down their Arms. From Genoa, that an Expreſs lately arrived there with two Packets of Letters from Spain, which confirm, that the Infante Don Carlos has been already complimented there in Quality of the Duke of Parma and Placentia; that the Naval Armaments are laid aſide, and the Effects of the Flotilla will be deliver'd out of Hand; yet ſtill the Orders continue for compleating the Army. From Parma, that the Parmeſan Garriſon there has been diſmiſs'd by the Regency; that the Lieutenant General Stampa is in high Favour with her Serene Highneſs the Dutcheſs Dowager, who has lately made him a Preſent of a fine Coach and a Pair of fine Horſes, and invited him to lodge in the Palace Rangoni, where the late Duke reſided during the Life of Duke Francis.

Genoa, April 7. N. S. On Thurſday arrived here a Barque in five Days from Calvi, upon the Weſtern Coaſt of the Iſland of Corſica, with Letters for the Government; the ſaid Barque having landed ſome Soldiers at Argagliola. By the Ship arrived from Scandaroon, we have Advice, that the Acceſſion of the new Grand Seignior to the Ottoman Empire had occaſioned no Alteration at Grand Cairo; but that there had been a great Inſurrection at Tripoli di Soria.

Riga, April 9. N. S. It continues freezing here harder than it has done all the Winter, the Ice being almoſt two Foot thick; ſo that Horſes and Sledges paſs from the Town to the Sea Side upon the Ice; and no Water is to be ſeen from the Top of the Light-Houſe which ſtands upon the Shore, though it has a Proſpect of ſix or eight Miles. Hence we do not expect to be rid of the Ice this Fortnight or three Weeks. By the great Quantity of Snow, which falls every Day, we have alſo a very good Sledge-Way.

Vienna, April 11. N. S. Private Letters from Conſtantinople adviſe, that the new Grand Seignior ſhews a great Inclination to cultivate the Arts and Sciences in his Dominions, and had for that Purpoſe reſolved to erect a College in that Capital, for inſtructing Youth in the Arabick, Perſian, Turkiſh, Greek and Latin Tongues; and alſo to print the Bible in the Turkiſh Language.

Paris, April 28. The Marſhal d'Eſtrees having reſigned to the King the Office of Vice Admiral of France, his Majeſty has given that Office to the Marquiſs de Goudrin, Captain of one of the King's Ships, and Son to the Counteſs de Toulouſe. The Count de Belliſle ſet out this Week, with the Counteſs his Spouſe, to take upon him the Government of the three Biſhopricks of Metz, Toul, and Verdun, and to reſide at Metz. The Duke de Durfort ſet out this Week to take Poſſeſſion of the Lieutenancy General of Franche-Compte, and will return hither ſoon afterwards, being named to attend the King in all the Journies which his Majeſty ſhall take this Summer.

Cadiz, April 10. N. S. Notwithſtanding the many Aſſurances we have had of a ſpeedy Delivery of the Flota's Treaſure, nothing certain as yet appears to be done; and 'tis the general Opinion, that the Government have made Uſe of ſo much of it, as not to be able to replace it before they receive a freſh Supply from America: The trading Part of this Kingdom is reduced to great Extremities by this Detention.
